Source: Adobe.com History Photoshop was originally developed by Steve Wilhite, a digital artist and programmer at the Canadian firm Burroughs UK, during the early 1990s. According to a biography on Adobe, Wilhite was at the time working on computer-generated artwork and needed a high-quality image editor to generate graphic images. He decided to redevelop a program that he found in a popular graphics magazine. The program was initially called Imageready and then replaced by a more basic program called PaintShop. Adobe released the original version of Photoshop in 1993 as a six-month trial (fully functional, but with a limited number of tools) and then released PaintShop for $595 per year. In the beginning, it was used to paint in an image, but Photoshop has come a long way since then, and it has now been used to modify photographs, create web pages, and make design elements. Kaufman tells BBC that she 'has no evidence' that there are anti-trans women emails Brynn Anderson at the Trans March, 2014. The director of the Transgender Law Center told the BBC that the documents were “extremely damaging” for trans people but she had “no evidence” that anti-trans prejudice was taking place. Brynn Anderson, senior legal counsel, stated that the “anti-trans” emails in the documents were in terms that could potentially be used to convict someone of hate crimes against a trans person, and she was worried that “it could be misconstrued as a hate crime.” Anderson says that she will be passing on the documents and any information about them to the FBI: “The letters are now in our hands, and we will be passing them to the FBI.” She said she was “very concerned” that the documents could be used to convict someone of a hate crime against a trans person. “They’re extremely damaging,” she said. “People should understand that they could be used to convict someone of a hate crime.”

Anderson stated that the release of the emails was obviously detrimental to trans people, but added that there is “still no evidence of anti-trans prejudice at any level in the FBI.” The FBI did not return a request for comment from the Washington Blade. Anderson has previously been outspoken against the Department of Justice's (DOJ) 2014 guidance, which had recommended that the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) "address discrimination complaints filed by transgender individuals that are consistent with the sex they identify as." The Transgender Law Center (TLC) objected to the DOJ's guidance in late 2014 and filed a lawsuit to have the guidance overturned. "These emails prove beyond any doubt that our government's discriminatory guidance contributed to the FBI's reputation as an office hostile to transgender people," said TLC staff attorney Brook Thompson in a statement. "Even a cursory examination of these documents makes it clear that the FBI and their leaders are engaged in a determined attempt to escape responsibility for their discriminatory attitudes toward the LGBT community.” James Nigg of the Human Rights Campaign (HRC) issued a statement in February that said that the emails “definitively prove
