Vimancherry - An English Reading software for Android. It can record your pronunciation of English words on the spot or on your way wherever you are. It can play the English pronunciation aloud or keep silent and capture the pronunciation only. It can even do search within text. Test yourself with randomized word lists. Try with your friends or your children, improve your pronunciation with quizzes and download over 100,000 words to your device for free. Go beyond the text with the dictionary and translate anything from English to your native language. Vimancherry wants to teach you English. Let's see where the road takes you. Supporting emails: tweit@cs.ucc.ie このアプリはリリース時に Google Play で見つけることができませんでしたが、現在はダウンロードすることができるようになりました。 That is the best text-to-speech application I have ever used on my android smartphone. I prefer it to speecholojieng, and I love that it can read kanji in Japanese. In addition to being able to hear the pronunciation you can look up meaning and examples of characters using the GUI. It is a very useful feature, and it really is worth having.Q: Finding the number of network drives a customer has I'm looking for a way to query a customer's network drives to get the count of what drives they have. What I'm thinking about is either a get-subscription or a get-accesspoint cmdlet to get the count. Or is there a built-in way to get this information on the fly with a list of network drives? A: You could use the Get-Subscription cmdlet and check the Count property. $subscription = Get-Subscription -Identity "Corporate" $subscription.count If you need the count of all drives, then you can use the Count property of $subscription. $subscription.count The above example would return: SubscriptionId : 57b20d5

by one of our guest... Sawananda Nepal, Lumbini ¿De dónde eres? De dónde eres? Welcome to the Nai Village! Table of Contents Welcome to the Nai Village! Let Me Take You to an Adventure Heart of the Village The Village Pokhara Valley & Maya Group The Children of Nai Village Meet the Children of Nai Village Keep safe! Heart of the Village On our first trip to Nai Village, we were received by Kumari Nita Wangdi. Nita told us that she would be our guide for the day. She introduced us to some families in the village and explained the Nai culture. Part 1: Heart of the Village Nita grew up in Katphul Village. She started school there and attended the Katphul Primary School. But because she wanted to learn more, so she went to the Biratnagar Autonomous Higher Secondary school. While Nita was at the school, she got married to a man from Nai. She gave birth to a son. Nita said that when she was at the high school, there was no appreciation for the Nai culture. Yet, for her own children, it was important to learn about it. So she said she did this with the help of her son. Kumari Nita Wangdi & son Nita said that there is a saying in the Nai society: ""Pay better care for your children, and their children will be well-nourished." "Nai people are a hard-working people, but at the same time they are thoughtful people." When Nita's son was 5 years old, she told Nai people that she was working. The first time that Nita's son was told that Nai people were not Hindu, was while he was playing football in their village, He asked why they didn't believe in gods. Nita's son started growing up not knowing any other way of living. After three years, his father left for Nepal. But Nita's son now looks for a way to find his father. Nita, also, now looks for a way
