First, the 4S1NR Museum in the Singapore Art Museum Complex is changing its format from an annual exhibition to a much more permanent showcase. The new 4S1NR Museum will put on up to 12 exhibitions in its first year, with no end date in sight. What's more, the first, temporary exhibition of the new Museum will be a collaborative effort between local and overseas institutions. The partnership will include a group of young European artists known as the Jean Raspail Lyceum from France's Provence-Alpes-Côte d'Azur region. Each of the five members of the group has been schooled in the tradition of the Renaissance and was trained in the use of the human figure in the arts. Their exhibition will be on from Thursday to Aug 7. The partnership is an important step towards generating more public interest in local artists, said Mr Andrew Ward, director of Singapore Art Museum. Mr Ward hopes the next step is to "reboot" the MOE Art Museum as it relaunches next year after four years of closing. "We are trying to look at our museum network as one whole," he added, pointing to the 4S1NR Museum as one example of a way forward. The new
