Story: Jack finds out that he is very stupid and unhappy with his life. He doesn't work. He just sits on the couch doing nothing. No money, no wife, no money, no mother, no father, nothing. He won't do anything unless he's forced to. Then there's the small fact that he lost his mind and he's locked up in some weird place called 'Downpour-town', so he has no idea what's going on. He has a friend, Pipe, who seems to be a talking pipe. Pipe tells Jack that something has happened, something different. Jack just needs to follow the pipe's voice to get to know what. Then there's the small fact that Pipe is talking to him like he is a real person. Good thing it's a talking pipe, or he could end up going crazy. Pipe takes Jack into a strange world with monsters. Pipe takes Jack in the wrong direction, but along the way they meet a series of weird characters. Most of them are normal, but very stupid. When they notice that Jack is going in the wrong direction, they turn on him and start beating him. It turns out that they are dealing with a war between two groups of monsters. For some reason they pick on Jack. Jack is taken to some City that he never saw, and then to a factory that his family lives in. Jack goes with a gang of bullies and a crazy old man to this place and he is late because he was so busy talking to Pipe. What is this crazy world? What are these monsters? Is Jack in Hell? Is he really insane? Gameplay: Is Jack truly insane? Is this game really insane? Yes, yes and yes. The guy is this crazy, and it seems like the Crazy Dad told him this is a must-do game. In order to see how crazy Jack is, let's start with the controls. They are simple, but not easy. Moving the character is very easy, and shooting is very easy too. You just have to press the right button. You can shoot with any gun, the grappling hook, or the grenades. That is for the good part. It takes some patience to walk to the enemies, but they always follow Jack. And you can just use the throw button to throw them against the wall. It works like in Dead Space. Jack is also the storyte

Q: Improving sql join speed I am on a new platform and I just realized that the server is running on RedHat I used to have MySQL 5.0 on my old platform, and the query is getting some time to execute. My query is very simple `SELECT `t`.`id` as id, t.`ref` AS `ref`, d.`ref` AS `dref` FROM `tv_a_librados` t LEFT JOIN `tv_a_destinos` d ON d.`id`=t.`ref` WHERE (t.`id` IN (1,2,3,4,5))` I tried to use INDEX with the ID, but I know that the IN lookup time is here related to the field length. I use INDEX, if it's the best solution. I tried to read about spintesting in MySQL, and I read that the best way to improve the query is to work with three tables. But the best I found was a method that requires to put an INDEX in the dref field. Now, I am looking for some tips about how can I improve the query.

A: I'm not sure about your scenario, but It could be as simple as this: `SELECT t.id as id, t.ref as ref, d.ref as dref FROM tv_a_librados t LEFT JOIN tv_a_destinos d ON d.id=t.ref WHERE t.id IN (1,2,3,4,5);` See it working live in a SQL Fiddle The only difference in the query is that you now join across the index. If you have a good index on ref, MySQL will be able to use it efficiently without any extra effort on your part.
