The therapy results and prognostic parameters for a series of 59 patients treated for primary melanoma of the anogenital area have been retrospectively evaluated. Only one patient was cured and 30 patients had a local recurrence. Twenty-six patients survived for more than 2 years and 22 patients (37%) survived for more than 5 years. Multivariate analysis revealed local recurrence, tumor thickness greater than 1.5 mm and incomplete excision as prognostic parameters. It is concluded that the treatment results of primary melanoma of the anogenital area are poor. Local recurrence and incomplete excision are prognostic parameters for this tumor.// Package unit tests to test the usage of mul and Div package unit import ("math" "testing" "github.com/stretchr/testify/suite") type mulDivSuite struct { suite.Suite } func Test_Add_Div(t *testing.T) { suite.Run(t, new(mulDivSuite)) } type mulDivTestSuite struct { mulDivTests } type mulDivTestSuite2 struct { mulDivTests } func (suite *mulDivTestSuite) TestAdd3_Div2(c *C) { su 0cc13bf012

The invention also relates to apparatus for performing such method. Anode electrodes are electrochemically consumed in electrolytic processes for recovery or plating of a metal or metals from a solution of the metal(s) in a chelating or complexing solvent which is a ligand for the metal(s) and which is a constituent of the electrolyte. In some cases, however, plating of a metal from an aqueous solution is either impeded or inhibited by the presence of the chelating or complexing solvent in the aqueous solution. In order to overcome this problem, the chelating or complexing solvent can be partially replaced by a fluorine containing compound which is a ligand for the metal(s) in the electrolyte and which can be electrochemically reduced at an anode and, then, oxidized at a cathode in an electrochemical cell. Accordingly, in one embodiment of this invention, a method is provided for operating an electrochemical cell containing at least one metal containing anode and having a fluorine containing compound as a constituent of the electrolyte, which comprises supplying a current to the anode in a flow of a substantially de-ionized aqueous electrolyte solution containing the fluorine containing compound such that fluorine is removed from the electrolyte at the anode to form a concentrated fluoride salt deposit on the anode and then contacting the concentrated fluoride salt deposit with a metal in a substantially de-ionized solution of the metal in the electrolyte, whereby the metal is deposited from the solution on the fluoride salt deposit whereby the fluoride salt deposit serves as a surface for the deposition of the metal and the fluoride salt remains unreacted and is dissolved in the solution of the metal to form a metal solution from which the metal can be recovered by a known metal recovery process.

In another embodiment of this invention, a method is provided for operating an electrochemical cell containing at least one metal containing anode, which comprises supplying a current to
