The present invention relates to the field of health care equipment, and more specifically to a patient lift for use in a home care setting to allow a patient in need of extra support to transfer between a bed and a wheelchair. It is known to provide patient lifts to allow a patient to be more mobile. However, prior patient lifts commonly require mechanical lifting, such as either a mechanical lift or a manual hand crank, to operate the device, and such mechanical devices are not well suited for use in a home care environment. We develop expertise in government advocacy, litigation, and policymaking to support a wide range of environmental issues. We are the largest environmental law and policy firm in California, representing both public and private clients. Our attorneys have previously served in the California Assembly and Senate. The air you breathe is deteriorating in many U.S. cities because of a severe lack of enforcement of environmental laws by local, state, and federal government agencies. If you are living in one of these areas, you can do something to help change this situation. We advise you to do the following: If your municipality is preparing an air quality plan, or if you are moving to a new city where the air is already degraded, lobby your local government to adopt more stringent air quality standards. Inspect your air quality monitor to ensure it is working properly. When purchasing a home or apartment, visit cities with good air quality. Inspect air quality studies and plan your home or apartment in light of their findings. If you own or operate a business in a city where air quality is poor, consider switching to cleaner-burning fuels. The relationship between acute and chronic urinary beta-glucuronidase elevation and the glomerular filtration rate. The urinary excretion rate of beta-glucuronidase activity in the urine of patients with chronic renal failure
