Box Jail, also known as box[1] (originally a short form of "box mod"), is a modification of the Xbox 360's dashboard that lets Xbox players customize their interface. Box Jail is developed by Evolved Game Technologies (EGT) under contract to Microsoft. Box Jail is available for download from the Xbox Live Marketplace and as a retail disc. Box jail is a forpay application[citation needed], but it is free for Xbox Live gold members[citation needed].[2] The application is compatible with all Xbox 360 consoles and Xboxes.[3] A list of all Xbox 360 dashboard features, excluding those that can be implemented using Box Jail can be found in Xbox 360 Dashboard Guide, including storage and content system-related features. Early builds of Box Jail did not include any video and TV features. Subsequent builds of the software have added functionality to view television content in the background while playing games, for instance. The Xbox 360's dashboard can also be switched between a traditional, hardware-centric design and a graphical design for which the user has more control over the user interface. In the traditional dashboard, the player views the dashboard as a video image and can interact with the video by accessing the "Xbox Guide." In the graphical version, the player can select a set of icons to access different parts of the system. These features can be switched on and off via a toggle switch located in the lower right corner of the screen. The graphical dashboard originated with the Xbox 360's successor, the Xbox One.[4] The box[1] is an item created by the South Park television series which can teleport its wearer to the
