The relaunched Final Fantasy XV will not just be a remastered version of the game. There have been rumors to be more information regarding this title. In the video previews, we could hear "I am the Storm", I think it's this song's name of the song from the game. But, the song was released as single 1 month ago. so, did the game companies remove "I am the Storm" or there is something different? "but, the song was released as single 1 month ago.so, did the game companies remove "I am the Storm" or there is something different?" If you mean the "single" version of that song, then yes, they removed it from the game. Haven't heard it since the release of the single. The song could be included in a special version of the game, as we do see other songs in the videos that are not in the actual game. somehow FFXV trailer have this to boost interest for the game but Final Fantasy XV thing I'm really interested with the direction that Namco is going with the game. I hope that they continue to improve and make it worth our while and that is without adding moe to it... which is what they do to all their final fantasy games. Of course you have to be careful because their older games can be moe but it's a balance. we already have FFXV but even still a new trailer would be great to get us all back into the hype that was at the beginning of this year.
