"If we're going to deliver more realistic and visceral gameplay, it requires more data," said Peter Bosz, Head Coach of EA SPORTS™ FIFA. "The HyperMotion Technology that we've developed uses intense analysis of footage from a real-life football match to create a comprehensive data library. We've seen first-hand what this technology can do, and it's clear that it can increase the authenticity of the FIFA experience for players and coaches everywhere." Using data from the pitch, FIFA calculates more accurate line data and ball-lift models and an updated set of intelligent defensive schemes that help make every match feel unique. Players can still exhibit their natural on-pitch movements, but these have also been augmented and curated using data. Over 800 individual unique animations have also been added to the All-Stars team. During our playtests, we saw how EA SPORTS FIFA let us play without restrictions while using the tech, and it made us feel more connected to the game. One of the most obvious things is that players make the moment-to-moment plays more realistic. In real-life situations, a player doesn't jump back for a ball that's going to drop; it takes a split second to make a play. That's also why players run with the ball in hand instead of chasing, and that's why players are screened if they expect a pass. For example, at one point in our game, I was being pressured by my back line, so the AI immediately began to screen me. This was because the AI recognized the threat I posed to their goal, and in order to prevent me from getting the ball, he was waiting for me to move my hips and lower my shoulder. That's a moment that's important to me because it's just like how it is in real life, and it's a key moment where the whole team reacted as one. The real-life movements and emotions used in the FIFA All-Stars match were fully recreated in FIFA 22. During this, we feel the player's identity and live through their experiences, and this also makes it possible for us to focus on more important moments, such as when the player commits to a tackle.

FIFA is a global soccer franchise that has sold over 100 million copies worldwide. A key tenet of FIFA is to deliver deep and authentic gameplay that allows players to experience the game as it is meant to be played. FIFA tournaments capture the excitement and romance of real world football. But they also pit the best players against each other in feverish action as they battle for victory on the pitch. The result is football magic that's as close to real life as we're ever going to get. So, what really makes FIFA? There are the game mechanics, of course. You'll kick and head the ball, dodge and jink, and anticipate where your opponents are going to move next. But the real joy of FIFA comes from being part of the action, like nothing else can. You'll be feeling the game and the world in new ways as players dine, travel, watch, and even dig out your soccer boots. The real joy of FIFA comes from feeling the game and the world. You'll be feeling the game and the world. What's new? 1. FIFA Ultimate Team™ "Now, for the first time, you can assemble a squad from players and real-world sports and celebrities." As you earn coins for completing various aspects of FIFA Ultimate Team, you can assemble your very own collection of some of the greatest soccer players, and real-world sports and celebrities from around the world. As you earn coins for completing various aspects of FIFA Ultimate Team, you can assemble your very own collection of some of the greatest soccer players, and real-world sports and celebrities from around the world. Everyone in your squad can fill a unique role on the pitch. You can fill your foot with the strength of the meanest defender, your head with the brains of a manager, your heart with the passing ability of a center forward or your boot with the speed of the fittest striker. 2. Club Battles "FIFA Ultimate Team now brings non-Pro Clubs™ to the forefront. The introduction of Clubs brings leagues and competitions to the game. Clubs are non-Pro clubs that a player can fight for in their favorite sports. Clubs can be considered like small clubs in real life." The players you draft in your Club Battles against rivals of similar rank can fill out the team you're forming in your Ultimate Team, playing up to three positions. For example, if you have a strong
