The technology was shown off for the first time last week at the FIFA eXtra Match official Fan Festival and it was a revelation. It provided a new level of realism that didn't just feel like a football game, but an immersive experience like you're really in the middle of a match. We got to try the technology out at EA Sports' HQ in Leamington Spa. We pre-loaded the game in advance so we could test it on both the PlayStation 4 Pro and the Xbox One X. Manage cookie settings The technology was created by an up-and-coming studio called Motive Sports & Technology, which only started work on this project just months before the game's launch, as part of Electronic Arts Worldwide Studios. The studio's CEO, Dr. Sean Ryan, says the ambition was to create a football game "that looked real but also felt entirely familiar and fun". "So we started with creating a new physics engine that allowed us to get the player models to move realistically. This involved simulating the actual motion of the player as they would move through the air using actual player motion capture data.” “We then used this same motion capture data to not only move the player, but also activate their animations. The result is that the game feels real and authentic, but on top of that it feels extremely familiar and fun.” “We then looked at team tactics and actions from real matches and used some of the actions from the opening goal of the 2018 FIFA World Cup Semi-Final to create the AI. Finally, we added some of the most talked about new features from FIFA Ultimate Team such as character creation, squad rankings and My Player, bringing it to the next level.” And, he adds, “This technology isn’t one-dimensional, as we are creating a simulation that feels real and authentic, but on top of that we have true simulations of the players, which feel familiar but which also allow players to be creative and invent their own moves.” Motion Capture Technical Producer, Simon Lay, explains why
