Extract and inhibit HTLV-1 Tax function by selectively suppressing Tax-dependent transactivation. The human T-cell leukemia virus type-1 (HTLV-1) transactivator protein, Tax, is an important regulator of viral gene expression. It initiates viral transcription, at least in part, through its ability to stimulate the immediate-early (IE) 2 promoter of the viral genome in an autocrine fashion. This effect is mediated by Tax-dependent transactivation through two distinct transactivation domains (TADs): TAD1 and TAD2. The targeting of Tax to specific target cellular genes is also critical to the successful pathogenesis of this virus. Here, we used a recently developed yeast two-hybrid screen to identify cellular proteins interacting with the TAD2 domain. Using this assay, we identified c-Jun 3da54e8ca3
