Description Minecraft is an open world sandbox game where you are placed in the role of a player in a procedurally generated, world on an endless island, filled with a variety of creatures, biomes and resources to discover. In multiplayer, players can drop into each other's worlds as a result of "Portals," which are essentially instant travel from one world to the next. However, to prevent players from creating maps that are too large, there is a cap on the number of portals (currently 500) that can exist between worlds. Depending on the presence of lights at night (either from the creative palette or player-placed torches), days will have a brighter color palette, along with new textures. As a result, the world will get darker as the time draws closer to night. At this time, torches are no longer required to see the day. Version 1.5.1 also adds a new quest for an NPC, the Lost Merchant, who lost his boat. This quest could be obtained by helping the merchant repair the boat, and then finding the boat heading north of the Dark Forest. Being thrown by a bush has been fixed, since the movement of the target will now get rid of the spider instantly (at the last point of contact) rather than merely slowing the player down. Flying redstone torches no longer causes them to blink. Most blocks no longer have a redstone path to their surface. This includes: Signs now
