Juan Barajas-Castro, 36, was convicted in June of two counts of rape and three counts of sexual battery, Columbus' FOX affiliate reported. The International Business Times reports that Barajas-Castro sexually assaulted the woman, who was 12 years old when the assault occurred, four to five times in 2009. The woman was asleep during the assaults. "It's going to wake up the whole neighborhood," Barajas-Castro told the victim as he was raping her, according to the IBTimes. A spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's Office told the IBTimes that Barajas-Castro's sentence was "appropriate given his criminal history and the seriousness of the offense." After the incident, the 12-year-old was sent to a child psychologist and did not return to school for a number of months. She had to be flown to Johns Hopkins Hospital for treatment for complications from the sexual assaults, IBTimes reported. Barajas-Castro is a Honduran immigrant who was granted a temporary visa from the Department of Homeland Security in 2014, allowing him to live in the U.S. at that time. Most of the entries in the Department of Homeland Security's electronic system that monitors the individuals granted provisional immigrant status listed Barajas-Castro's country of birth as the U.S. Virgin Islands. DHS officials in a statement issued Monday said that

Thank you A: It is entirely possible to write a lambda as a regular function. Example: def add(x, y): return x + y add_lambda = lambda x, y: x + y Is essentially the same, except lambda allows you to omit the brackets around the parameters and return value. A: Python's lambda expression supports a limited form of currying. You can, for example, write: a_plus_b = lambda x: lambda y: x+y For more information, see the topic in the documentation.
