He also suggested “negotiating with China” to prevent North Korea conducting a nuclear test. And he said the administration planned to introduce a package of sanctions aimed at preventing Pyongyang from getting a first nuclear test. He also called for talks aimed at preventing a crisis on the Korean peninsula. “I would rather take one risk than one million risks,” Mr. Obama said, trying to explain to the American public why he has introduced the sanctions package. Some experts have said that these efforts to contain North Korea might be too little, too late. After all,
