WASHINGTON — A new ESPN documentary, "The Oath," examines the objections some NFL players had to the league's policy — instituted in 2010 — that players must stand for the national anthem and prohibits them from sitting during the anthem. The film, airing this week on ESPN, follows several former NFL players as they attempt to express their views on the issue of a man in the locker room last season protesting and requesting during the anthem that the league leaders, including owners, stand with them. Mr. Trump's reaction has been to say that NFL owners should fire players who don't stand for the anthem, and to encourage other owners to cut or suspend players who do not stand. In the film, several NFL players said they were aware of Mr. Trump's tweet calling for boycotts, and they tried to use their leverage with the league to persuade the owners to reverse their policies. A group of several dozen players, including Dallas Cowboys cornerback Byron Jones and former Buffalo Bills quarterback Tyrod Taylor, urged owners to consider the effect of those protests on their reputations and box office receipts, and their message was acknowledged, though not directly addressed. 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a semiconductor device having a circuit structured by a thin film transistor (hereinafter, referred to as TFT), and to a method for manufacturing the same. For example, the present invention relates to electronic equipment on which a liquid crystal module is mounted as a part. In this specification, the term semiconductor device generally indicates devices which can function by utilizing semiconductor characteristics. Thus, electro-optic devices (
