To investigate the association between alcohol consumption and metabolic syndrome in Japanese men. Data from six independent cross-sectional studies (response rate, 84%) were used for a meta-analysis. The multivariate-adjusted odds ratio (OR) for having metabolic syndrome was 0.75 (95% confidence interval [CI], 0.64-0.87) for light (or=45.9 g/d) consumption compared with non-consumption. Compared with non-consumption, light or moderate alcohol consumption significantly decreased the OR for having metabolic syndrome. There was no significant dose-response relationship between alcohol consumption and metabolic syndrome. The present study showed that moderate alcohol consumption has beneficial effects on metabolic syndrome in Japanese men.Q: Text input in Java GUI, entering text with a mnemonic I am creating a GUI with Java. I am creating text fields in the GUI. I would like to know if there is a way to assign a text to my text field, while keeping the text in the field the same and the text in the field's (such as a mnemonic) to be the same as the text input in the GUI. So when I edit my input, the text in the text field changes but the mnemonic remains, just to confuse the user as to what they entered. The program I'm working on has numerous text input fields, and I would like to keep the look and feel consistent. There are two different mechanisms that use a mnemonic: FileMaker Item Database A: Yeah, you can do that with JTextField(s) and Document.getText(int offset). Something like: JTextField mnemonicTextField = new JTextField(20); mnemonicTextField.setMnemonicAt(0, true); document.

During the past few years I had developed several internet-based applications at the IBM Hursley Headquarters. One application, utilized in Hong Kong, allowed visitors to see live up to 10 hours of TV programming as long as the Internet was available. Slide Share is an extremely simple presentation application which allows individuals to view and share PowerPoint presentations. Slide Share is incorporating a viewer and a web server and creates custom pages at the visitor's sites that automatically reload as you modify slides. To get the best out of the Slide Share presentation, you should have a high speed Internet connection. The audio and video features that you can use will be determined by your internet connection. The better the connection, the more you will be able to control the presentation with your mouse, so you should use a reliable connection. Installation The PowerPoint slide presentation to be shared can be saved as a picture, i.e. a Windows metafile or a JPEG file. The Windows metafile format is generally better to share as you can choose to save in one of several sizes. The file size is the determining factor. When saving in JPEG format, the file size is only dependent upon the number of images used in the presentation. The larger the number of images, the smaller the file size. Download and save the Slide Share application Using your web browser and any web browser, login to the IBM S/W Applications Web site at If you have already logged into the IBM S/W Applications Web site, your login ID and password will be remembered. You can use the same login ID and password for all the programs on the site, including Slide Share. The Slide Share application is ready to be downloaded. You can download the application for Windows or Mac. Follow the onscreen instructions to complete the download. Next you need to save the presentation as a picture format. This will be in a folder called, sslide. Open the PowerPoint file you wish to share on Slide Share and export the presentation as a Windows metafile. This is the format that will be saved to the folder. Open Slide Share After you have saved the presentation as a picture format, connect to the Internet and point Slide Share to the folder sslide. It is recommended that you use the Internet Explorer browser. When you have done this, you should see the Slide Share logo on the
