(Sherlock)Plague Of The Living Dead is a horizontal scrolling shooter that has you controlling your character as he travels through a scene of zombie-like corpses. To move left or right, you need to jump from one scrolling column to another. When your character reaches the end of the screen, the level is over. Each level has many paths with which you can traverse the scene. A large number of craft such as tanks, planes, and horses, as well as many enemies are thrown in. Most enemies come in large groups and are often led by a brainless zombie. During the game, you can keep repeating the level until you find the key. However, due to the limited game time, you must use precise jump control to reach the goals. The original IRU Communications (Infrared Repeater Under Control) allowed the user to use a second computer in the area of the primary computer. Remote access has been built into the IRU for many years now. The IRU2000 consists of three parts: the IRU2000, the IRU2000M, and the Power Utility Kit. The IRU2000 provides
