Pro has been officially released, we have a .Q: Why would a user answer his own question, already solved? As in the topic, is there a reason to answer your own question, if it has already been answered? A: Everyone wants their question to get up voted. That's why. One reason I have seen is to prevent other people from getting an answer for a particular question (a quick high-hater). If you see a question you were able to answer, and it has been answered well, by someone else, you should answer that question. A: As a general rule, don't answer your own question. If you have an idea for an answer, leave it for someone else to solve, and write your own answer separately. Particularly, don't include a bunch of solutions to the original problem in your own answer. As it says in the FAQ, "Don't do this". A: The main reason, in my mind, is that it can give you a better understanding of the reasons for the answer that you received. By answering it yourself, you learn more about how it works. Q: Merge two lists into one containing all the entries from both I have two lists containing dictionaries list1 = [{"name": "Foo"}, {"name": "Bar"}] list2 = [{"address": "123"}, {"age": "20"}] How can I merge these two into a list list3 = [{"name": "Foo", "address": "123", "age": "20"}, {"name": "Bar", "address": "0cc13bf012
