And there are some patients who are uncomfortably stuck between a life and a death sentence. These feelings of doubt, the frantic uncertainty of time that could be cut short and the fear of a pre-meditated death that would be painful and invasive, are strong motivators for my patients and their loved ones to give good and meaningful end-of-life care. However, an incongruous part of my job is being a spiritual advisor. I'm sometimes left wondering if some of my patients are genuinely ready to die. And there are some patients who are uncomfortably stuck between a life and a death sentence. "Death with dignity" is a phrase that I've often heard people say who are being considered to receive the lethal injection.
