PDF | Since people have become aware of their actions, they have. They were victims of continuous delusions and. However, despite all the big. But we have to be careful because there is. To teach crowds, you need people to think they were and they heard how. Whatever your goals, tell people what it takes. Whatever goals you strive for, your goal should not be limited. This is our most popular connection through which we broadcast. Chapter 2.

Messaging and advertising through the media and the Internet. When you identify with an idea, force, or concept, you are already partly associated with it. Consider: we exist. We are.

We are about 10 billion people. Of these, about a billion are affected. We must communicate constantly, daily, hourly. Each person should be able to write a message addressed to another person in the nearest elevator. Surprisingly, today we already "live in the world." The concept of "world" expands its field of understanding. We no longer treat it as something unimportant or incoherent. We see and realize this as one of the elements of modern life, and this is not very pleasant. We depend on all kinds of advertising and connections, and lately we can't even imagine how we can do without it. We believe everything that is offered to us, and we believe everything that is asked of us: from Colgate toothpaste to a battery of sausages. We want to buy everything and we cannot give up this addiction because we don't really have it. If we managed to free ourselves from this belief, we would immediately come to a crisis. We have no choice, we must continue to believe that the world is a multitude, from field to field with endless supplies. We need it and are afraid that it may disappear. We trust immensely in everything we want and fight if we don't have it. "I" is a subject with needs, and every other "I"-subject, or in other words, everyone, is its competitor. We need advertising. We are aware of this, and any person who is aware is also aware of what you are reading now. We must learn to be conscious of advertising. You must consciously look for every opportunity to get our message across to the people. You chose this, then
