My parents, Richard Darshak and Christine Mahoney, who was born in Cleveland and Richard was born in NYC, were married in 1921. I was born in a small town called Falmouth in the tip of Cape Cod, Massachusetts in 1938. My father grew up in Cleveland where he was born and raised. My mother grew up in a small town called Waterford in western New York where she was born. My father was born in America. My mother was born in America. She had an American passport. I was an American citizen from the time I was born. My father was a veteran of World War I (1917-1919) serving in the 10th Army Company, 1st Battalion, 7th Field Artillery, on the plains of France, the very same lines of troops that my grandfather's son, Albert, had helped to capture at the Battle of the Marne in 1914. My father was wounded in the shoulder, the arm was blown off, and he lost his right leg. My mother, my parents divorced in 1951, not too long after my father had been discharged from the service. My father's discharge brought a letter of reinstatement from the Veteran's Administration that he had been a disabled veteran. I was four years old. Richard Darshak and Christine Mahoney were married on March 30, 1921. I was their first child and was named Richard Darshak Jr. On April 28, 1938 I was born.
