All the code is thread safe. The data format used by the zlib library is described by RFCs (Request for Comments) 1950 to 1952 in the files (zlib format), rfc1951.txt (deflate format) and rfc1952.txt (gzip format). All functions of the compression library are documented in the file zlib.h (volunteer to write man pages welcome, contact zlib@gzip.org). A usage example of the library is given in the file test/example.c which also tests that the library is working correctly. Another example is given in the file test/minigzip.c. The compression library itself is composed of all source files needed to compile and link all these programs. The library is implemented on top of the well known library by Mark Adler (madler@alumni.caltech.edu). This implementation is part of the open source project Eric Homger (www.homger.com). Acknowledgments: Thanks to all those who have tried to improve zlib over the years, especially Fran Leffler and Arthur Valette. I have seen reports

Where does the fight come from? For some, the fight comes from within. Some live too much for it to let it go. Others just see it as nothing more than a means of survival. Where does the fight come from for you? Finally, we realize that a fight or a battle is not the end result. A struggle is only a beginning. We must look inwards. We must be conscious of the differences between fighting and letting go. We must be conscious of our feelings, their triggers and their consequences. We must be conscious of our impulses, thought patterns and the emotions that come from it all. There are times when you feel like you are in a fight, and there are other times when it feels like there is no way forward. Yet, you
