Steps for creating a magazine cover If you're going to learn how to create a magazine cover, let's start with the basics. The first step is to open a new document in Photoshop. Choose File • New • Adobe Photoshop Magazine Cover. 1. Starting with a layout The new canvas represents the magazine's standard 9x12 inch (standard size) to 11x17.75 inch (short size) page. For my test magazine, I chose 9x11 to match the standard size of the magazine and to create a nice 1/4" bleed on all four sides. First, choose the type of paper you want to use for your magazine cover. For my magazine, I chose to use a heavy stock with an image that was stitched on the cover. Step 2: Placing my text blocks The next step is to place my text blocks over my image. Create a text layer and place it over my stitched image. Create and edit the text as necessary. Step 3: Adding Extra Stuffs If you're making a cover for a magazine, you'll want to add additional things. I chose to add a date, a magazine title and a logo. Create a new layer, set your type tool to Times New Roman, and place the text where you'd like it. I can use the Object > Type > Create Type command or click on the Type tool in the tools palette to create a new type and then drag to create. Create a new layer for the date. Add any words or numbers that you'd like to appear on the cover. Create a new layer for the logo. You can use any logo program to create a logo, I just created one in Photoshop. Step 4: Final touches After it's been added to your canvas, you'll want to go in and work on it, making changes until you have the image that you want. The finished look of a magazine cover is best viewed at a larger size for the best readability, so make sure you save your file as high quality as possible. [A case of atypical bronchiolitis obliterans organizing pneumonia with multiple nodules]. A 53-year-old woman was admitted to our hospital for investigation of multiple nodules in her chest. A chest radiograph and chest computed tomography (CT) showed multiple nodules in the right upper and lower lobes. A fiberoptic bronchoscopy revealed diffuse, irregular narrowing of the right upper lobe bronchus, and a transbronchial lung biopsy revealed a non-caseating granuloma with positive results for S-100 protein, desmin, and α-smooth muscle actin. According to the diagnosis of atypical bronchiolitis obliterans organizing pneumonia, multiple lung biopsies and additional examinations were performed and high-dose prednisolone was administered. She was treated successfully with steroid therapy. The steroid dosage was gradually tapered. After 1 year of treatment, the nodules were completely regressed and bronchiolitis obliterans organizing pneumonia recurred in only one region of the upper right lobe. Her condition stabilized after a second course of steroid therapy. There have been a few reports on atypical bronchiolitis obliterans organizing pneumonia, but the distribution of nodules and their relation to the characteristic histology have not been described. We report a case of atypical bronchiolitis obliterans organizing pneumonia with nodular lesions, which provided an opportunity to review the pathogenesis and histological aspects of this disease.Q: Java boolean expression not working This is the method I have been asked to write. My first instinct was to convert the method to another, but that didn't work so I decided to keep the method the way it is. The method should return the value true if and only if the two arguments are both greater than zero, and false if and only if one of the arguments is negative. I want to show the reason in code. So far I have: public static boolean isGreaterZero(int a, int b) { boolean result = false; if (a > 0 && b > 0) { result = a > b; } else if (a > 0 && b

The veteran Brexiteer reckons it cost Theresa May her job and is witheringly critical of the 1922 Committee as he stood up in Parliament. Davies said: "We may now conclude that the EU referendum result was a mistake and we have got to live with the consequences of that mistake. "The whole idea of this was to restore our sovereignty to this country and leave the EU. "That's why I'm afraid we should have left well alone." He continued: "The same people who did that went out and said we've got to do this now. We have got to leave the EU." (Image: PA) Davies also said he had been told that the Tory 1922 Committee had "fixed" May's latest Brexit plan to the Cabinet. He said: "If that's the case, then I'm afraid the Government is dead in the water." 'The same people who did that' And he added: "The same people who did that – who voted to leave the EU – went out and said we've got to do this now. "They said that the vote that we gave them at the referendum had to be honoured and now they're backtracking. "So, you know, what is clear to me is that there are several hundred people who did that and we shouldn't be taking orders from anyone from the 1922 Committee." (Image: Crown Copyright 2015) (Image: Crown Copyright 2015) Clipped down the back Davies, one of the ugliest man in Parliament, also criticised the way the Prime Minister and her colleagues have been tailed around by head honchos and failed to show an independent spirit. Speaking in the Commons he said: "You can almost see them going off on little missions. They don't show any independent spirit. "They're rarely
