A TOUCH OF A SPIRIT The original version of HYPERDENSE put your fate in the hands of the almighty dice, allowing you to feel the suspense of each decision that was made. Based on that concept, HYPERDENSE DRAGON MASTER is a game with two spools of fate rolled with a turn-based system where the decision of the spool has an effect on the decision of the other spool. The story progresses as the two storylines connect with each other, allowing you to create a path through the story together with others. 1. THE STORY LINE. EXCERPT The stage was cleared of people as darkness descended. The small wedding party waited. The bride, dressed in white, had on no veil. She did not need it. The groom looked nervous. His uniform was rumpled, with his shoulders hunched. His heart was filled with anxiety. "Tthe shooting star has come!" A figure appeared in the middle of the clear sky. A golden shooting star glowed brightly. A sound resonated: an ominous horn blast. It was a sign of the appearance of the shooting star. The wedding party raised their glasses, ready to toast. The shooting star sped towards the heavens, becoming smaller and smaller. The shooting star flew close to the ground, and then disappeared. All that was left was a scattered mist of golden sparks. The wedding party gazed at the space where the shooting star had been. No sound of the horn could be heard. The bride uttered a faint sigh. END The first day of the rest of their lives had ended in failure. A tthe shooting star has come! The wedding party raised their glasses, ready to toast. The shooting star sped towards the heavens, becoming smaller and smaller. The shooting star flew close to the ground, and then disappeared. All that was left was a scattered mist of golden sparks. The wedding party gazed at the space where the shooting star had been. No sound of the horn could be heard. The bride uttered a faint sigh. END In this tale, you will be guided through a story which is not linear. Like in the story above, you can move towards the conclusion of the story using the choices that you make. - Character Poss

Other polymers such as polycaprolactone exhibit slower biodegradation, whereas polyhydroxyalkanoates (PHAs) degrade faster than any other material (Birnbaum et al. (1978) Enzymologia, 29: 222; Garrett and Cooney (1989) Biopolymers, 30: 185; Rose (1990) Prog. Polym. Sci., 15: 1). A variety of applications have been reported for PHAs, and their use as biomedical materials has been investigated (Rochelle et al. (1993) Biomaterials, 14: 81; Yasuda et al. (1995) Recent Patents on Polymeric Materials, 281: 81; Sawhney et al. (1994) Biomaterials, 15: 141; Herron and Schroeder (1996) Biomacromolecules, 37: 4937; Petrella and Barns-Huet (1999) J. Appl. Polym. Sci., 76: 1297). The materials are attractive from an environmental perspective, as they are biodegradable, and they are derived from renewable resources. Since PHA biopolymers readily hydrolyze in vivo, and carbon is released as metabolic end products, their degradability can be tuned by copolymerizing different monomers in various compositions. Biodegradable polymers have been widely investigated as carriers for drug delivery systems (Banerjee et al. (1990) Science, 250: 789; Coury et al. (1997) J. Biomat. Sci. Polym. Ed. 7: 1; Ellis et al. (
