Note that Photoshop is a web-based image-editing application, meaning it's often free or very inexpensive for an unlimited number of images. There is a paid Adobe Photoshop Lightroom app that enables you to view and edit your images on your desktop or laptop, but you can only work with one image at a time. In this chapter, we explore how to use the built-in Photoshop features to create effects. We cover many of Photoshop's most common image-editing commands. Figuring Out Your Props You can perform many in-camera image-editing tasks within the image-editing portion of Photoshop. However, in order to get the best results, you need to create some of the required tools yourself. Although Adobe Photoshop is powerful, you need to create your own filters and effects to perfect many images. This is why it's important to be familiar with these tools and be comfortable creating your own effects. Here are some of the key features you can create in Photoshop: Effect filters: You can apply filters to your pictures to change the appearance of the images. You can change the look of red eyes, the skin tone, the brightness of a picture, and many other things. Photoshop has a vast array of filters. Brushes: You can use brushes to achieve interesting effects, such as painting sky or clouds on a picture. Effect adjustments: You can add, modify, and change the brightness, contrast, and exposure of images, making them easier to see and more pleasing to the eye. Hue/saturation: You can add or remove color in the image and give it more of a nature feel. Filter feature: You can create special effects that aren't found with the default Photoshop filters. Text: You can add text to your image to provide an interesting and unique caption. Layer effects: You can create effects that appear on individual layers. These effects can be limited to a single layer or applied to other layers in the same image. Transparency: You can create an image that has multiple layers, such as a layered photo composite. You can manipulate the transparency of the image by changing the alpha channel. Web effects: You can create an image that looks like it's from the web. You can use the type of background you have in the image and combine it with other text or image elements to create a unique look. Background effects: You can create an image with a smooth, fuzzy

Nasopharyngeal tumors. Experience of a University Hospital in Venezuela. In Caracas 632 patients with histological diagnosis of nasopharyngeal tumor were submitted to a retrospective study from 1969 to 1980. The incidence and age distribution of the various tumors were as follows: undifferentiated carcinoma 39.9%, non-keratinizing carcinoma 36.1%, and epidermoid carcinoma 8.3%. The majority of the patients were from the pediatric age group with a relatively low incidence of the tumor in adults. The angio-invasion of adjacent structures was found in all the studied cases. Among the complications were: the destruction of the bony structures of the skull, particularly the palatine and sphenoid bones, the compression of the cerebellopontine angle, the invasion of the great vessels, and the retraction of the brainstem and spinal cord. The therapeutical approach included the use of steroids, radiation therapy, and the surgical excision of the primary tumor.Luxury Italian fashion brand Salvatore Ferragamo has revealed the direction in which it's headed, and it's not in a good direction. The company is suffering from a 25% decrease in sales, and it has been forced to cut its workforce by 20%, with the survivors promised a salary increase. The company has also been forced to accelerate plans for closure of 40 of its stores. Getty Ferragamo has been on the decline for many years, and it had been predicted that it would be out of business within a few years, but its fall from grace has been relatively short-lived. The company has so far avoided serious problems, thanks in large part to its close relationship with Italian government officials. Last year, the Italian government made a deal with Mercato Holding, the investment company that owns Ferragamo, to provide it with funding worth €25 million. It also agreed to a minimum purchase of €200 million in annual turnover from Ferragamo. And Ferragamo was the first to get a direct loan from the Italian government. After the closure of its factory in Italy in 2012, the government agreed to a €650 million loan, which was to be paid back in the event that the company was sold or went out of business. In return, Ferragamo was granted a 75% discount on all imported goods. The company was also allowed to retain its right to import, rather than being relegated to a
