If you're a developer who's having trouble with configuring email servers, here's a solution you can use to automate email sending with the help of the popular command line tool. Blat is designed to be a cloud solution that lets you send emails from the Command Prompt. The application allows you to have a simple command to send emails through a variety of different providers, including Gmail, Yahoo, Outlook and others. Once you've configured the email server, Blat lets you send a specific message to several recipients, with an optional attachment, or to a large mailing list. While Blat provides a simple interface to the users, it's also powerful enough to let you send emails with different parameters, so you can have the application email you to different email addresses. In addition, the application lets you parse the entire email, including subject, message body, and all the attachments, so you can have them imported into your favorite text editor. Blat Client Features: Since Blat is designed to be a cloud service, you can work as an emailer from anywhere, especially if you're connected to the internet. The application uses the Command Prompt as an entry point, and you can send your email with a simple configuration, without needing to install any other software. When you send your email, you get an original, as well as a copy that's sent to the provider's server, with a unique message ID. Blat uses a command line interface, to let you type more than one command at a time, and work with multiple parameters. The application gives you the ability to send email messages with an attachment, from a single or a large mailing list, to a small group or an entire email list. You can also choose between sending a plain text message, using a coded text file, or inserting the text directly from your text editor. When you've configured your email server, the application parses every one of your messages, so you can look at the entire text of the email, including attachments, and the important information you need. You can choose whether you want a plain, or coded message, and what you'd like to find when scanning your message. And because the app sends emails through your existing email providers, the recipients don't need to install software or use a virtual machine on their computer. The application's interface enables you to work with multiple servers, and send email with a wide variety
