About Zaccaria About Zaccaria: Founder of the legendary game Zaccaria is Italian Gian Luigi Zaccaria. Even if Zaccaria founded during the digital age, the company gained a well known position in the DIY industry with very popular reproduction of arcade machines. Zaccaria is known for its high quality, pocket-sized, die-cast metal devices. Besides, the compact size and the low weight of the Zaccaria reproductions makes them much attractive for the hobbyists and the pinball fans of all ages. Zaccaria is also famous for its accessories for pinball tables, which are very high quality and made exclusively for the game. Before Zaccaria, the pinball machines were very small, delicate, fragile devices and also very costly. C Handling: In some tables - maybe all - the line between slide and rotation speed is rather thin.

On the table Moon Flight - the fast sliding player has to have lots of upper body muscle and some wisdom about how much push/pull he is willing to endure. My experience with the table is that at slow speeds rotation is faster than a slide. I tried the table at pretty low sliding speed and at low rotation speed and the table keeps hold on playfield. At higher sliding speed and higher rotation speed the table reacts faster and the ball seems to be rushing by, pushing playfield (if pushing downwards). Notice that a certain pattern emerges - a horizontal orientation on playfield C gives the best start. Some traps: Sometimes a fast hitter ball drops suddenly and fast. A single spike is helpful for cutting out an area before a whole bank of targets is hit, Sometimes a ball will drop very close to a banked target and the ball will behave like it is in the "R" position. You have to be quick to get your ball out. Sometimes a hit is very straight, but a big factor is its angle of descent. When

Review Table Features: Click for Bubbles Full size test photos | Click for Bubbles Click for Map | Click for Bubbles Pinball Arcade PGN - 28-Sep-2017 Gamer Pub - 10-Nov-2013 Score: 9.2 9 of 14 Zaccaria takes all the rage that is floating around on the internet in regards to pinball (in a good way btw) and uses it to make a score table. More specifically the 1990's. Coming from a younger generation, I'd be impressed if the table had released 6 months, or even 3 years ago. Instead I received it 6 months after launch. After originally being announced 12 months prior to release, I genuinely expected to wait at least an extra 6 months for a completed set of raster images. From the start I was already on board with the concept. Yes, it should be fun to see if you can get aces and eights or eights and aces, but what makes this table really unique is how close they were to achieving it. With this knowledge, it was time to play. Zaccaria entered the table head first. Unlike a lot of the score tables we get in the hobby, they have decided to charge for their tables. They have priced their old school punk rock pinball that much higher, that they can't seem to fit it under the $700 bar. Making each of their tables around $90 each. Thankfully they have made it in the $40-70 range, for a few more men and women, that like to play pinball. Sidenote: We have no reason to believe that there are hidden fees in the $40 range. We wouldn't mind putting our money where our mouth is and endangering someone's job if there was an issue at the table. The price is honestly a harder judgement than it was with some other score tables we've played. Setup Small notes for you before we dive in: It is important to note that this table was probably not setup to perfection the day they shipped it, seeing that there was a large portion of the table unfilled. If you are purchasing this table with the hope that they'll someday fill all the slots, that's not in your favor. On the flip side, it's better than getting that table because you want to push yourself harder. It's better to set yourself up for 50 tops and red
