Title: [eBook][Ghana] The 1992 Constitution of the Republic of Ghana Author: [Kermit WOOD] ISBN: [9780215177356] Page: 431 Format: PDF / Kindle / ePub The 1992 Constitution of Ghana provides the legal framework that serves as the basis for regional reorganization and the creation of additional regions. Because of the decentralization aspects of the 1992 Constitution, administrative regions (local authorities) have powers that go beyond those set out in other parts of the Constitution.. The 1992 Constitution also established the "Incorporated Council of the Republic," and it is unclear whether it has any real authority. The 1992 Constitution also regulates the functions and powers of the Parliament and the National Separation of powers, 1992 Page: 75 Conclusions " President's Role By the 1992 Constitution, the President is not treated as having any fixed role and is frequently put under a "political test" as part of the system of checks and balances. We've tried to organize the 1992 Ghanaian Constitution by chapter for ease of reading. This could be useful when researching various areas of the Constitution. Our Constitution Maps will help you find if a particular document is part of the Constitution. This is really great information and the members here are very gracious in sharing. Ghana 1992 Constitution The 1992 Constitution of Ghana states that the country's sovereignty resides in the people of Ghana " in whose name and for whose welfare the powers of the government are exercised. Currently there are four Regions and twenty-eight Districts, and in the future there could be more. The 1992 Constitution is an additional step in the process of political and economic development of Ghana. In 1992 it was agreed to establish a Council of State to advise the Government and Parliament on the organization of Ghana's administrative regions. In 2009, the holding of general elections was put back to 2011 (subsequently changed to 2012). On 4 September 1992, the National Liberation Council proclaimed Ghana's independence.
