Welcome to the A.V. Club, a weekly column at The Onion's A.V. Club that hopefully will introduce you to some interesting, new-to-you entertainment. In fact, this is the first story in the column, just like earlier columns were the first stories, and hopefully you will read them and find that you enjoy them as much as we do. And of course, feel free to let me know what you think, or share your own favorites in the comments. What do you want to read next? The only thing I did feel bad about during the opening scenes of "Waterworld" was that I had to start at the beginning again. Never mind the fact that this is one of the biggest movies I've ever seen, with hulking characters, epic fight scenes, and a cast of some of the best actors in Hollywood, I couldn't help but feel bad that the movie was such a long, drawn out affair. What are you gonna do? The average movie runs 95 minutes. It took a little over three hours for "Waterworld," and you think the filmmakers had anything else to do with their time? Did you guys see the story about what happened to all the pirates? It's pretty funny. I was hoping they would find the one guy who had a little more sense of humor, and throw him overboard. Hey! He could've swam back and helped everyone else. That would've been a great ending, especially considering how much everyone hated the pirates. The rest of the movie was pretty much the same, except they added some more oil rigs, because apparently everything on the planet became covered with oil in a matter of hours. I'm not mad about that. The best part, though, was when our heroes, our heroes, stopped at a bar called the S.S. Jackus, and bought everyone drinks. And I
