What's new:

Update! Published on April 7, 2017 As a Pm18 Facebook Fan, you guys voted in your thousands to put the AI in ED through the roof. Congratulations. We're going to create a new ED. You've been asking for it for a few years now. This new ED is going to consist of big mechanical behemoths blasting eachother into dirt and dust. 1. Give Mass Effect a serious shake up! Use the Hammer to break up single firing broadsides and follow through with special weapons and endzones. 2. Take EVE Online Mass Effect. Specifically the wide range of ships and modules in each class. 3. Set up a separate system for people to start and promote 100 Guilded Wars players. 4. Club Wars Starfox Multiplayer. Not very promising. A good smattering of worlds. 5. Done. Same old people explaining how good things once were, and how they've changed since the days of yore, and how it's probably better to just get with the program and talk or play like normal people. Put that in a tumbler with some really cheap red wine and you've got yourself a party. In smaller tumblers, for use out on the bierplatz, in dooner cups filled with urine and/or reindeer semen. Which brings us to Oisin and his idea to set up a fleet of 10,000-odd Empire Vets to help us get high and fired up as a community. Erm, that's nice, but a little expensive.... and 10,000 is not a lot of people... But what if we went to the AI? (Bordeaux? Aged in a Keg? Full white wine? Red out of a Crock With Whatever's Spackle.) The AI started doing this kind of stuff on its own years ago, but it was obvious that it wasn't nearly as sophisticated as it should be. Well, they seem to have managed to rediscover this passion for industrial design - and have certainly 'get into it' years before the Devs were even consciously aware of current technological trends. The AI is evidently best when multiple games are in progress across a mix of queues, but it 'always' focuses on games with rather than against the players at this time, so let's say that getting a solo player (or in this case,

Brother and sister, Haru and Haseo, have just moved to the “Grand Kaijyo”, a city replete with things both wonderful and evil. As per usual, Haseo is bound to make trouble and the only way to help him is to turn his sister into a devil. Key Features: Sandra has always wanted to open up a café but between newly found affluence and husbandly responsibilities, just can’t seem to get going. Meanwhile Haseo ends up in a bad way and Sandra needs to do something to calm him down. The devil’s work remains incomplete and with his sister needlessly turning into a demonic creature she’ll need to take matters into her own hands and sacrifice herself. Max has arrived in Grand Kaijyo after falling asleep in Osaka. Here he ends up defending a strange old man from a gang. After learning of the old man’s love for cats, Max lets him live and begins helping him with his love of baking. As time passes by, the old man sends Max to different districts to do odd jobs. All the while, Max is searching for a place to stay, a means to make money, and a way to repay his debt to the old man. At the same time, the gang is trying to destroy the old man’s bakery. Meanwhile, the old man and his pet cat are fighting demons from the underworld. As Max helps the old man, strange things begin to happen and everyone’s lives are placed in danger. Koyomi is a town to the west of Karen Province. Two battles, one with the demonic spirit of Bishamon and another against a group of monks with an anti-demonic weapon that has worked to corrupt the demon. Though a remnant of the original Imperial army, this unit was left with no money and no allies. Yet it was left with a will to live and protect this town. After the battle, Koyomi is hit hard, and a mysterious organization rises to take control. Initially, the organization appears to not seek direct control over the town, but a mysterious man soon makes himself known. His name is Kuro. With the help of Yoko, Haru, and his unit, Koyomi is able to form an alliance with the Ex-Imperial Army. However, life is not quite perfect as it is. Outside forces enter into the fray and wage war on all sides.

0x000012E0Kilpikota / Press ReleasesQ: Efficient way to fetch all the company names (200000+) from Last.fm API and create a key value map for later use? I'm working on a feature for my social networking website where the users can see what their friends uploads in the "What's My Playlist" sidebar and also what songs their friends has commented. What I'm trying to achieve at this moment is to get all the plays on all the artists, max 10 per artist, then get all comments on all those songs, max 10 per song with the ID of that song. So I run this query: ?method=user.getPlaylists&user=user5462 &api_key=api_key &format=json&count=10&offset=0 &less_than_or_equal=100000&greater_than_or_equal=100000 &type=artist &callback=? And this gets me all the plays+comments of all artists, as the does in this example. {"results":[{"played_tracks":[{"albums":[{"title":"Clef Hangers","artists":["billyjonE"],"uri":""}], "comments":[{"artist":{"url":"","uri":""}],"limit":2} Now I have to parse this to get what I want
