In an information processing apparatus, such as a server, a main storage apparatus such as a disk drive (DRAM: Dynamic Random Access Memory) is mounted as a storage unit. Various techniques are introduced to improve the performance of such a storage unit. For example, in a technique disclosed in Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 2003-017898, a disk storage device is provided in a server. The disk storage device stores as write data data to be stored in a cache memory and a write data storage area having a larger capacity than the cache memory. In addition, a controller in the disk storage device sets all write data in the cache memory in accordance with the state of an access. In the above configuration, when writing is completed in a write data storage area without the cache memory having the write data, the disk storage device transfers the write data from the write data storage area to the cache memory. After that, the disk storage device writes the write data in the write data storage area. As a result, the write data in the write data storage area has been stored in the cache memory. Since the write data is stored in the cache memory, it takes a relatively short time to access the cache memory. The response performance of the disk storage device may be improved by storing the write data of the cache memory. In this configuration, however, if the write data stored in the cache memory is useless, then a capacity of the cache memory is not effectively used. A bill intended to enhance Virginia's antibribery laws has reached the House floor. HB 3111, introduced by Del. Jim LeMunyon, D-Richmond, would make certain actions that "affect the value of the money or other benefit" to be prohibited, with an additional prohibition against bribery under certain circumstances. Antitrust violations would be excluded from the bill's anti-bribery restrictions. "A competitive market is essential to a free and prosperous society," LeMunyon said. "Yet, when politicians are paid with money or other benefits, such payments can shift power in politics, reduce consumer choice and stifle competition." By this measure, the bill would make it illegal to: Pay a person for services. A person offers a "thing of value" to a government employee in exchange for "anything of value." A person gives a government employee money or other

Q: Load Custom HTML5 Video I know the title of this question might not be the best or most optimal, but due to other restrictions in place I need to ask this in a different way. On this page I'm using the HTML5 Video element with the video-js plugin (However, I'm developing a separate HTML5 page with custom styles for the video player. I was able to modify the width of the video tags, move them to the left or right, or change the margins. I was able to set them through the tag in the main html file, but how can I add this to the player itself? I've also tried this, but it didn't seem to work. A: I'm using And replacing class="video-js vjs-default-skin" with video-js Dead or Alive Xtreme 2 Dead or Alive Xtreme 2 is the
