In this article, you and I will look at setting up your site to work properly with images. What is an image that you will use in your online project? This is an image that will be displayed on the site, as well as in its individual elements. For example, as a background for an article, as a logo and so on. What are the basic settings to make the image that your site will be displayed correctly on the Internet? First, it's the size of the image. For most sites where you want to use only a small image size will be fine up to 500 pixels. If your site will use a fairly large image, then you need to use an image size of 2048 pixels. In fact, the quality of the site's display is not affected by its size, but since we are talking about how to create a site with high traffic, you need to make sure that all the pictures were the same size. The same applies to photographs. Let's say you decide to make a site like "Website about fishing". You can choose the size and resolution of the picture. If you choose too small a resolution, it will not look very nice. And if, on the contrary, too big, then it will be very overloaded with information. In order to create a site that will display images in maximum quality, you need to have a site with a high resolution. In order to create a beautiful site, there are some rules to follow. Picture quality. To create a site, you must remember that the picture that is uploaded to the site must be of the highest quality. This is to ensure that the site loads quickly, and the image automatically zoomed in and out when you change the scale. The site displays a picture of a larger size to allow visitors to see more and better view the picture. Image size. The bigger the picture in size, the more space it takes up on the site.

We sought to determine risk factors for loss of weight during treatment with irinotecan and leucovorin. A retrospective analysis was performed on 19 patients with advanced colorectal cancer, who had received intravenous infusion of irinotecan and leucovorin. Body weight, toxicity and biochemical data were analyzed. No change in body weight was observed during the infusion period in 16 of the 19 patients, while the remaining 3 patients lost a mean of 5.3 kg body weight (2.5-11.8%). Seventy-three percent of the patients were underweight before receiving the treatment. No significant difference in the median survival time was observed between the patients who lost weight and those who did not lose weight. Six patients had grade 3 or 4 nausea/vomiting. The other complications were as follows; fever (23%), general fatigue (23%), anorexia (11%), and peripheral neuropathy (5%). No significant differences were observed in platelets, alkaline phosphatase, aspartate aminotransferase, alanine aminotransferase, and gamma glutamyltransferase between the two groups. The risk factors for loss of weight in patients undergoing irinotecan and leucovorin therapy were poor nutrition status, low body weight, or a past history of chemotherapy without loss of weight.Newspaper 1 is a free newspaper available all over the world on The Other Side.
