Bleach Circle Eden 6.ABBOTSFORD, B.C. — For all the time we spend watching football on television, we don't get to see the players wearing pads and helmets, scrumming and colliding at full speed. That's what happened at the B.C. Lions' practice on Friday, where fans were treated to an open locker room full of manly men getting all sweaty and bashing into each other. The B.C. Lions are still the CFL's most entertaining team, but during training camp we still see some interesting things. A guy who is always open to questions takes the podium at FanFest to speak on a variety of topics. We speak with a player whose stock has risen through an aggressive offseason. Another guy is trying to make a quick run in the CFL, and he speaks about how he came to play in this league. Our weekly mailbag, which has always been a highlight of the week, is compiled from reader questions. Looking for more Lions? We cover the team all the time during training camp. Follow me on Twitter at @CHineseski for the latest news and updates. This week, Tom Hines asks the following question, which was also answered on Twitter: -Which defensive back is most improved from last year? -Who has impressed you the most in training camp so far? Follow @mikeberanoBone stress injury of the femur--an animal experimental study. Bone stress injury (BSI) of the femur was experimentally induced in six sheep. In two groups, the fractures were deliberately and significantly displaced. After surgery, animals were kept in a weight bearing position. Postoperatively, the lesions healed without endoprosthesis. In four sheep, fractures were created, but the fragments were not displaced. Histological examination showed an extended resorption of the bone marrow in the fracture areas. Similar results were obtained by quantitative scanning electron microscopy.10 Weird And Wonderful Facts About The Dog 10 Weird And Wonderful Facts About The Dog There are many amazing aspects of our dog friends that may not be so well-known.
