You will be asked whether you want to allow a program access to your entire screen, or whether it should only have permission to activate the window when it is docked. You can click either command to change your selection. You can drag, at least the corners of a window, or the entire window to change the position on your screen. Double clicking the window's title bar tells you that the window is docked, and you can right-click anywhere to gain access to some of the same menus as when the window is not docked. A window can never be docked by you, it cannot be docked by another window, only by the operating system, and the operating system only needs to be in the foreground for you to dock it. It is possible to move a window out of a docked state, but you will not be able to make it dock itself again. Deep Fritz 12 Activation Key Generator What is
