range I want to do some calculations on a range between 0 to 99 (inclusive). For example, in my context, the answer is 25. This is easy enough to do with two "if" statements and some code to do the calc. But I'm wondering if there is a more concise way to get this same result.
My initial idea was to use the modulo function, which would be 10 in my case, with 10 being between 0 and 99 (excluding). However, it appears that the modulo function only works on integers. How could I get it to work on my range of 0 - 99? Example: if(range%10 == 0){ //calculation }else if(range%10 == 1){ //calculation }else if(range%10 == 2){ //calculation }else if(range%10 == 3){ //calculation }else if(range%10 == 4){ //calculation }else if(range%10 == 5){ //calculation }else if(range%10 == 6){ //calculation }else if(range%10 == 7){ //calculation } } } A: How about: int result = 10 * (range / 10);

The "Designed for You" approach to training is an ongoing process. This professional level course is designed for people new to Cinema 4D or those who need a refresher. You will use the course to sharpen your skills and provide you with the knowledge to achieve the following: Typical meters for measuring fluid flow through pipelines are known in the art, as exemplified by U.S. Pat. No. 3,316,681, issued to Black. In such a meter, a rotatable drum is used to seal the fluid inlet end of the flow tube, to which a drive is coupled to a differential gear section disposed within the meter to drive the drum in rotation. The rotatable drum will normally include a slip clutch or similar device for holding the shaft in the same position after the fluid pressure has disappeared. The drive will usually be configured to be placed in a neutral position only after a predetermined time interval following the disappearance of fluid pressure at the inlet end of the flow tube.

In the past, this type of meter has had a problem in that it has had to be set up to work with a minimum level of fluid flow through the meter. If the meter is used on a large system, such as a sewage treatment plant, in which flow rates are low, this results in unnecessarily high power consumption due to the consumption of electrical power by the differential drive. Also, if the flow rate is too high, it is possible that the drive may overload and rotate faster than the desired rate. A need has therefore arisen for a fluid meter that will overcome the above-noted problems and disadvantages of the prior art.Q: Meaning of the "natural" [C++] keyword I am trying to understand the C++ language. Our question is regarding the parks. I had planned on 2 days at Magic Kingdom, 2 days at Hollywood Studios, and 2 days at Animal Kingdom with a day before we left to return home. We have been to WDW many times in the past and my last time was 2 days before we left. I am generally ok with 2 days in WDW, but am wondering about spending 4. If I keep the same order as above, will we need to do that much sitting? - Asked by Anonymous on 1/14/2013 Hello! Thank you for your question, my name is XXXXXXX, and I will be happy to help you with your planning! First, please accept my apologies that the hour it has taken me to respond to your question is such a reflection of our current day's news cycle. Unfortunately, I can't divulge any information that would lead us to spoil the Magic or the park of the day for others. Before your trip, please make sure that you have enough time in your itinerary to get to and from each park so that you don't have to spend time sitting in traffic. Please consider how you will balance your days between dining, shopping, attractions, and transportation. If you have a resort stay, there is a shuttle that runs between the parks. It runs every 20 to 30 minutes, so that is helpful
