Minecraft time limit In Minecraft, time is represented in a clock format. There is no real-world meaning to the number of minutes the clock will display, but the number of minutes may be different in other games based on the year in which the game is set. Time in Minecraft In 2009, the version 1.4 of the game was released. The version was released on 10 April and was downloaded on more than 200,000 computers and on 30 million CDs. As of December 2009, the version is still one of the most popular versions of Minecraft. It features several new features, including the ability to: The recent release of version 1.5 also allows for increasing the number of minutes in the clock to almost one million or better. This allows for a total of one year and a day before the clock is reset, although it will take a year to make one minute pass. To accomplish this feat, it would take several million blocks to make the minute mark, and would require a clock with a stopwatch. On 7 December 2017 Minecraft released version 1.14 and it included the ability to set your time to any number of minutes by pressing the A (Ability) key while holding the value you want it to be. The ability to change the number of minutes is not possible in versions older than 1.5. This was changed in the release of version 1.9 to allow for the value of minutes to be changed (in a range of 0-59). The number of minutes passed can be viewed using any computer or video game that is being played on (e.g. a computer, a smartphone, an iPod). This is possible as long as the computer or game has direct access to the clock in Minecraft. This occurs when a player presses the A ability key while in the game. The computer or game will then see the minutes passed. The first value of minutes that can be displayed (i.e., the minimum) is minutes 1 (that is, the time displayed is set to 1). This can be changed by simply pressing the A ability key while in the game. The time has no real-world significance and is set by the player using the clock display in the game. This means that the number of minutes displayed can be different in different games. The number of minutes can be changed by the player in any of the versions of Minecraft that are currently available, and this may not be possible in future versions. It can be
