My therapist recommended a particular dose of anti-depressant every few weeks and I think that needs to be done with all of them. I think what was the most frustrating was that when you started the new med, you had to return to your old meds for a while. I've had to wait a while to be off of my Lithium, for example. So I started on Abilify XR. It was supposed to have less side-effects than the older medication but instead, because I'm not on Prozac, my hands shake. So that's not new. But I was starting to have more dysphoric mood. So I switched to Abilify. I didn't notice much difference, but I guess it's because I had just been on Abilify for a couple of weeks before that, so you have a little tolerance to the drug. I stayed on Abilify for a while, and was told that once you stay on this for a while, you stop needing it. I've heard some anecdotes of people just stopping medication completely, because it wears off. So I'm not there yet. I mentioned about 3 weeks on the new anti-depressant. That's why they are talking about how these medication's take a while to work. I've been on the newer medication for about 3 weeks. So in the future, I'd like to try to have a different regiment: one longer medication, one shorter, one longer, and maybe switch. I think that's what would be most effective, because some of my medications are close together. So what are your limitations? I would like to try to do more stuff, but I don't have any particular limitation. My memory isn't great, so I can't do stuff that I used to do. I'm sure there's things I can't do that I just don't
