Local declaration of variable B in a inner class (A) cannot be made static I am trying to make a class (A) that I'll use to define and run some queries, and to return a local int field (Y) that will be used for processing in another class (B). I don't want the local variable (Y) to be static because it needs to be accessible within multiple threads. This code below will give me the error: "Local declaration of variable B in a inner class (A) cannot be static" I am not sure how to solve this. Any guidance would be much appreciated.

public class A implements Runnable { public static int Y = 1;
    public void run() { while (true) {
        Thread.sleep(1000); if (Y == 2) { System.out.println("In Class B"); } } } } public class B implements Runnable { private int Y; public void start() { Thread t = new Thread(new A()); t.start(); } public void stop() { t.interrupt(); } public void run() { while (true) {
