crashes and reboots when trying to install any version of the program, or even if trying to run an old version. This bug can be resolved by using the appropriate bits for the program. QtNote 4.7.1 - 4.7.2 is working fine on Windows 10 but does not support modern threading. If you must use the old style of threading, this is what you do: 1. Download QtNote 4.7.1-4.7.2 2. Edit the qtnote.ini file in the program folder. 3. Replace the Line: `setQtConfig("QT_ThreadsSupport" "0")` with this: `setQtConfig("QT_ThreadsSupport" "1")` 4. Run the program. When a user attempts to install QtNote 4.7.3 or 4.7.3 in Windows 10 (Home Edition) using the installer package, the installer dialog looks like this: As far as I can tell, there is no obvious way to get the installer to actually use the new installation method. In order to get QtNote 4.7.3 to install with the latest installer package, the `QT_ThreadsSupport` line must be replaced with this: `setQtConfig("QT_ThreadsSupport" "1")` Obviously, this is only necessary if you are using the old style of threading and want to use the latest version of QtNote. QtNote is a small and elegant note-keeping tool. The application quickly creates a new text file and stores the text in it. You can add an unlimited number of notes to each file and then use the NoteManager to view them or search for them. New entries are automatically saved to a 'Notes' folder in your home folder. The Notes Manager stores and displays all your notes. It is useful for people who like keeping notes for themselves or for doing things like jotting down addresses or reminders. QtNote is an easy to use note-keeper that creates and stores multiple notes in the same text file. Users can keep track of notes, such as addresses, to-do's or as an easy method of planning events. QtNote supports the following features: *

- * Multiple notes can be saved to one text file *
- * Highlighting of spelling errors and errors such as punctuation or duplicate words *
- * 'Find/Replace' - The ability to search in a plain text document and replace certain words or phrases *
- * Allows users to export text in the clipboard to a text file which can then be opened *
- * Search for notes by date, text, title and
