Napalm. . . Many years ago, I met a woman who had been my fifth wife. I had died with her and I had studied with her. I was a student of the Habakkal School of Medicine, and when our relationship succeeded, we had become equal, and I had started to teach. She had a husband, a relative for whom she had been a sacrifice, who had gone to the war and was killed. She had been in love with him and had been hurried out of the country, to live with her in a small town in Pakistan.
